DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1 and 5-15 are allowed and renumbered as 1, 4, 5, 7, 9, 11, 2, 6, 3, 8, 10, and 12 respectively.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

As per claims 1, and 5-15, the claims are directed to a method and system for providing services to a mobile device and a stationary device, both own by same user. Services purchased by mobile terminal, purchased services sent by first server; second server is made aware of services received and purchased by mobile terminal via first server; second server recommends similar services related to first purchased services by mobile terminal to the mobile terminal; user then selects recommended services to be used by user at a stationary device, the stationary device is registered through mobile device and recommended services chosen by mobile terminal to be displayed or used on the stationary device are downloaded through second server.

The prior art of Boyle et al. teaches data communications integrating narrowband and wideband data transports to optimize the use of wideband through narrowband channel. Updating information from a server to a mobile station having a queue list ready of those notification that could not be successfully delivered by means of sending out notification to the mobile station through a narrowband channel, the mobile device then sends a request to the infrastructure through the wideband channel to obtain updated information. Session is established after authentication is validated.

The prior art of Milford et al. teaches a system that has a plurality of media servers and a service broker that provides a link between the users and the media servers. The service broker adjusts its alternative choices to best fit the subscribers and their resources that are on the same network.

The prior art of Wolters et al. teaches a method of multi-cast message. The method includes: gathering information from various users determining associations between users by categorizing the information into one or more interest; obtaining services from service provider related to the categories of interest; selecting users and communicating service information to the users using the multi-cast message.

The combination of the prior art references in combination or alone do not teach the claimed invention as claimed in claims 1, and 10; having two servers the first server supplying a service to a mobile terminal while the second server suggesting or recommending similar services to the same mobile terminal; second services provided by second server being deliver to a stationary device designated by user of mobile terminal. While, Boyle has the ability to transmit information to update a mobile phone it does not have the ability to purchase or even all the elements of the system required as claimed. Milford, in the other hand, has the ability to present mobile terminals a variety of services from different servers by means of a service broker it does not differentiate between a first server and a second server providing the service to mobile terminal; not only that, the service broker chooses from the plurality of multimedia servers alternative choices to present to mobile terminal that are dependant on conditions set by the service broker to best fit the needs of the type of terminal being solicited. Wolters is a targeting advertising method for attracting customers to items that fit their information of interest by sending a multi-cast message. Hence, the prior art reference in combination will not read on the claimed invention as claimed in the independent and dependent claims.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
